REMEMBER:

Wild animals belong in the wild.

They help to keep our water, soil and forests healthy, through pest control, pollination and seed dispersal.

Keeping a wild animal in your home or community is dangerous.

It can cause injuries and transmit diseases to people and other animals, including rabies.

Eating bushmeat is dangerous.

You can't be sure where the meat has come from, what it is, or how it has been prepared or stored. Sometimes meat is taken from animals that were poisoned or that died of diseases. You and your family can get ill or die from eating bushmeat.

IF YOU KILL OR TRADE WILD ANIMALS AND ARE FOUND GUILTY, YOU CAN GO TO PRISON FOR UP TO 30 YEARS.
